A special meeting of the Dublin Municipal Council was held yesterday for the purpose of considering reports of the Housing Committee, which recommended the borrowing of money for the purpose of building Houses for the working classes, and also the placing of £8,000 on the city rates for the ensuing year for that purpose.

The Lord Mayor (Mr. J. M. Gallagher) precided.

Alderman Thomas Kelly, Chairman of the Housing Committee, proposed the adoption of the reports.

Mr. Beattle said there were 70,000 workers throughout the city, and if this motion were han these men lived in houses of a rent of £40 to £50 a year.

Why should not those working men who accorded.

Mr. Dohn Ryan said he was opposed, on including the £2,000. He found labourers earning from £3 to £4 a week living in tenements at 2s. 6d, per week. Civil servants and clerks earning not more than these men lived in houses of a rent of £40 to £50 a year.

Mr. Boattle said the Corporation labourers were well paid; they had permanent employment, sick pay, and helidays, and pencions were well paid; they had permanent employment, sick pay, and helidays, and pencions were well paid; they had permanent employment, sick pay, and helidays, and pencions were well paid; they had permanent employment, sick pay, and helidays, and pencions were dearned good money to live in bette CORPORATION LABOURERS' WAGES-A a Mr. Moran said the principle of building out of the rates was a bad one. Owing to the new valuation there was to be a reduce tion in the rates, but at the first moment here was an attempt to snatch £5,000, or 2d. in the £, from that reduction. He hoped the Council would not approve of it. This proposal was to be, he feared, the beginning of a pernicious practice, which, if not stopped now, goodness knew where it would end.

Alderman Quaid opposed the motion. He said the city was already paying £12,000 loss on buildings already pat up. That was due to inefficiency, mismanagement, and wire pulling on the part of men who paid no rates, and through an irresponsible system of representation. If the Corporation passed this motion, it would convince the Treasury that Dublin was going to do this building business without their help in future. What suggested was that the Corporation should issue Stock for the purpose of raising the financial system of the Council for the sake of building only 52 houses, which this 2d, in the £ would only build. The Corporation had made fools of themselves by asking for the new valuation, which had cost a bid of money, and now when there was, as they had often been told, a chance of reducing the rates on the new valuation, which had cost a bid of money, and now when there was, as they had often been told, a chance of reducing the rates on the new valuation, here they were, with the rates at the high figure of 10s. 1d. in the £, proposing to take £3,000 tout of the rates. And worse than all, the Treasury would take £30,000 a year more than they hitherto had taken out of the city.

Mr. Foley said that but for the increased valuation of the city this year the Council would have to ask for 12s. in the £ to meet next year's expenditure. Was there any man present who would face such. a rate as that: There was about £27,000 a year lost to the rates by reason of derelict and unoccupied property, and this £3,000 proposal would in effect be only adding to that figure.

Mr. Restire suggested that BEQUESTS TO DUBLIN CHARITIES.

Mr. McAvin said he understood that virgin land could be obtained in the neighbourhood of the North Wall for £500 an acre, while the land that the Committee proposed to take would cost £3,000 an acre.

Report 34 from the Housing Committee was then adopted by a majority. The £8,000 to be taken out of the rate will be expended on the Spitalfields area. The Council also adopted the report of the Housing Committee, which recommended a loan of £135794 on the North Lotts area for the purpose of building 324 four-roomed cottages at &s. a week, and 22 two-roomed cottages at &s. a week, and the concluded the business of the spitalfield and trade mark. of organisation and forethought. It is the best fed and the best felothed Army in the world. Its health is tended with a minuteness and success which would have seemed incredible twenty years ago. Mr. Tennant went into some detail on these points, and most of his statements were very satisfactory. Such details, however, although interesting and important, were not the things that the House of Commons wanted to hear yesterday. The country—Great Britain, at any rate—is deeply concerned over two questions which are directly associated with the Army Estimates. One is the condition of our air services, which is so little pleasing to a large section of public opinion that it has brought about the first defeat of the Coalition Government. opinion that it has brought about the first defeat of the Coalition Government day broke the enemy were discovered to at a contested election. When the superiority of the German Fokker became obvious on the western front Mr. Tennant tried to evade criticism by dwelling on the Fokker's limitations as a weapon of offence. He admits now that our airmen have been gravely handicapped by the want of high-power engines. Our machines have been "almost invariably under powered since the beginning of the war"; but an adequate supply of British high-power engines will now be at the air service's disposal, with results that should soon be visible in action. This is really good news, and it is reinfected with a provision for labourers' wages, which would increase after five years to about £19,000. These figures related, however, to an earlier form

British high-power engines will now be at the air service's disposal, with results that should soon be visible in action. This is really good news, and it is reinforced by Mr. Tennant's assurance that we have a plentiful supply of efficient pilots. Mr. Pemberton Billing, however, was not to be comforted. He complained that our air policy is wanting in the bolder elements of strategy, and that a series of raids, on a large scale, into Germany ought to be undertaken without delay. Some of this criticism is probably sound. Accepting all that Mr. Tennant asys about the material and presonnel of the air service, we may still suspect that its fighting energies are hampered by want.

The British Army in France is "in good health and good heart, and confident of victory." This is General Sir Douglas Haig's message to the House of Commons, and his optimism is explained in part by Mr. Tennant's statement on the Army Continued. Haig's message to the House of Commons, and his optimism is explained in part by Mr. Tennant's statement on the Army Fstimates. The new British Army is not merely a huge host of brave men, animated with a splendid purpose; it is a miracle of organisation and forethought. It is the best fed and the best clothed Army in the world. Its health is tended with a minuteness and success which would have seemed incredible twenty years ago. Mr. Tennant went into some detail on these points, and most of his settement in the command in this campaign. He is repeating on the other side of the Continent that strategy of wide and, swift encircling movements which so effectively overwhelmed the German resistance in South-West Africa. The victory near Mount Kilimanjaro creates a possibility that the campaign against Germany's last colony may rapidly reach a decisive termination. In this action he was opposed by forces which are probably the enemy's main forces, and certainly their main forces on the northern frontier. The Gervary satisfactory. A check has been put

The British Headquarters despatch mentions some mining explosions by the Germans, one of which did some damage to a small salient of our trenches. Enemy working parties were dispersed near the Ypres-Roulers Railway.

The German report also claims the bringing

The enemy exploded two mines this morning—one south of La Bassée Canal and the other near Neuve Chapelle. In one case some damage was done to a portion of a small salient in our trenches.
North of Ypres we carried out a successful bombardment of the enemy's trenches during last night near the Ypres-Roulers Railway. Our grenadier and machine guns drove off enemy working parties, who were attempting to work in a mine crater.
There was considerable hostile artillery activity to-day west of Lens.

Very numerous aerial actions were fought to-day in the region of Verdun. Three German aeroplanes were seen distinctly to have been brought down by our machines in the German lines. One of our aeroplanes, attacked by four enemy machines to the east of Lure, fought them, and succeeded in bringing down one of its adversaries, which fell in flames in the region of Cernay. The French aeroplane returned safely to our lines.

he provision of aeroplanes must now be con-sidered to be satisfactory. Indeed, it was ahead of the other essentials—viz., the supply of engines and pilots. The real supply of high power British engines was now coming forward, and would produce a marked improvement almost at once. He had received a message from Sir Douglas Haig, Commanding the Ex-peditionary Force in France, to the effect that the requirements of horses, food, forage, clothing, equipment, and transport had been met with unfailing regularity, and that the Army were in good health and good heart, and confident of victory. Frederick Treves had reported that the advance in the medical service, compared with that of the Boer War, amounted to a revolution.

with that of the Boer War, amounted to a revolution.

Ir. Pemberton Billing, in a maiden speech, argued the importance of the air service. We were subject to attack from the air at any moment. He appealed to Mr. Balfour to take his courage in both hands, and issne definite orders that all the material we had should be employed in raiding the enemy country. We must exterminate the Zeppelins, and we could do it. The bombs which were now being the state of th do it. During the progress of the war the problem with which the recruiting officers had to deal had materially changed. In the early stages of the war when a man presented himself for enlistment he desired to join the Army, and if he had any physical defects he did his best to conceal them, and many, no doubt, were successful in the endeavour. Latterly the position had entirely reversed, and under the group system men were trying to prethe group system men were to suade the doctors to find then s suade the doctors to find them not eligible for military service, in order that they might be rejected. This led the War Office to the conclusion that some means ought to be devised for tightening up the machinery, so as to enable the Army to avail itself of the service of men who, though not fit for combatant service, were nevertheless capable of nou-combatant duties. A Medical Board had been established in each military area, by means of which it was hoped that the efficiency of the medical examination would be materially improved.

THE CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR.

With regard to the conscientious objector, the House had decided that the bona fides of the objector should be left to the discretion of the tribunals. Up to the present many who had claimed exemption on this ground had been found non-combatant work of patients importance with great decades. ground had been found non-combatant work of national importance, with great advantage to the State. With this object it had been decided to form a Non-Combatant Corps, which would undertake the erection of huts, baths, and the manufacture of many necessary supplies. There had been a great deal of agitation in the Press and elsewhere about the position of married men, and the pledge given by the Government to the effect that unmarried men should be called first. There seemed to be a suggestion that that pledge was not being kept so long as so many unmarried men were being called up. He would only say in reference to this, that, as appeared in the Press to-day, energetic steps were being taken by the Government to revise the list of reserved occupations, with a view to reducing the number of starred men. That was really all that could be expected of a Government which had given a pledge which it intended

Since Russian troops were sett into the country, and a stern warning was issued against the influence of the German-Turkish intrigues, the attitude, both of the Persian Government and people, has entirely changed. Those who were formerly pro-German, and fanatical advocates of war, quickly became warm supporters of a good understanding with England and Russia. The newspapers have changed their tone also, and are now fawning upon those whom they denounced a little while ago as Persia's most dangerous enemies. THRICE WOUNDED

COLONEL.

Colonel P——, who has risen from the ranks, is one of the most remarkable officers in the French Army, asserts Mr. W. L. McAlpin, the Paris correspondent of the Dauy Mail. He has been three times wounded, once in the right shoulder and once in the left, and this last time in the lung. Relations between him and his regiment are, as is frequently the case in the French Army, more those of a father to his children than of officer and man. He knows almost every man by name, and although a non-smoker he keeps them well supplied with tobacco. His admiration for his soldiers is unbounded. "One cannot be beaten," he says, "with men like mine. Just think of the conditions they have been fighting in an ore member that in 10 square miles there is not 20 yards between the shell holes. Yet when the fire was at its hottest my men were quite calm. For five nights, owing to the charge they went into the fight shouting and singing with all their might."

Reuter's Agency states, according to "official information given out by the Peking Government on Monday, and received in London by cable to-day," Government troops during the past week continued pushing the Yunnan rebels back in both provinces of Szechuen and Hunan. In the Szechuen province both banks of the upper stream of the Minkiang are now cleared of rebels. In Hunan Government troops gained an important success near Wukong. The rebels in both provinces are now in full retreat.

For some time past the import of oranges has entirely stopped as the Royal Netherland's Steamship Company is unable to undertake that no part of the consignments shall reach Germany.

A further informal meeting of some of the members of the Unionist and Liberal War Committees was held yesterday at the House of Commons to discuss new questions arising out of the Army Estimates. The position of recquiting was again considered.

The Commander of the Rumanian guard on the frontier in the region of Corabia, while on a tour of inspection on the Danube, was arrested by some Bulgarian guards, and taken to Bulgaria. The Rumanian authorities are making inquiries into the matter.

Private Ernest Steinrich Rabbow, aged 21, of the 211th German Reserve Infantry Regiment, who, with over 1,300 comrades, has been interned in Leigh (Lancashire) Camp for over twelve months, was buried at Leigh Cemetery yesterday with military honours. Part of the British guard fired volleys over his grave and the buglers sounded the Last Post. Rabbow had suffered from consumption. He was the smallest prisoner in the camp, being under five feet in beight.

THE O'CONOR DON'S LETTER.

The City and County of Dublin Recruiting Committee met at their offices, 102 Grafter street, Dublin, on Tuesday, March 14th, 1916, at 10.45. "Present:—Sir Maurice Dockrell, D.L. (in the chair); Edward H. Andrews, J.P. (Hon. Sec.); His Honor Judge Brereton Barry, Andrew Beattie, D.L.; Mrs. J. R. Clegg, J. E. S. Condon, LL.D.; Lieutenant De Burgh Daly, M.D.; Miss A. M. Maddock, J.P. and Dugald Blue (Honorary Organisers).

A discussion arose on the question of discharged soldiers and allowances, raised by The O'Conor Don's letter. The matter had previously been considered by this Committee, and efferts were being made to bring the Statutory Committee into Lactivity in Ireland. Many cases of an urgent character had been brought before the Committee, and with this it was difficult, if not impossible, to deal, owing to the imperative character of the Statutory Committee.

TRANSPORT WORK AND

WORKERS. (PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)
[From Mr. Edmund Candler, the representative of the British Press with the Expeditionary Force in Mesopotamis.]

If bessts were decorated, the mule would be covered with ribbons. He also knows not defeat. His hardiness is proverbial; none of the plagues of Mesopotamia have affected defeat. His hardiness is proverbial; none of the plagues of Mesopotamia have affected his sang-froid. The pack mule, as a rule, serves the first line; in the second line the brunt of the work has fallen on the ponies and mules of the Japur and Bharatpur Imperial Service Transport Corps. The ponies are country-breds, ungelded, and atand about 13.2. They go in a yoke with a curricle bar, and are as serviceable as the cart they draw, which is the most handy.

A member asked how were these unfortunate men to know where to apply for information and relief. There were several institutions, such as the Soldiers and Sallors Farmilies' Association and the Dependente 'Aid Committee, with which we were associated in 102 Grafton street, doing good work in this direction, but they were not sufficiently advertised. He thought that a continuous advertisement in the newspapers would afford the necessary information.

It was also suggested that cards should be printed setting out the functions of the respective Committees, these cards to be exhibited at recruitine offices, police stations, railway stations, and steamships. By these means discharged soldiers would see that they should apoly at 66 Lower Mount street, and inquiries relative to separation allowances should be made to the Soldiers and Sallors Families' Association, South Frederick street.

In connection with the cases referred to by The O'Conor Don in his letter to the Press, the Chairman suggested that it should be dealt with by the Women's Branch, Executive Committee. A number of grievances were traceable to some error on the part of the soldier or his dependent in filling up forms at time of enlistment. Therefore, if the Women's Branch could examine the question they will be closed on St. Patrick's Day.

The Committee adjourned till Tuesday next. The offices will be closed on St. Patrick's Day. PONY TRAIN THAT WON A BATTLE.

It is commonly reported in the Force—with what truth I cannot say—that the Jaipur pony transport train won the battle of Shaiba. The story is that when the two hundred carts appeared cantering up on the horizon, in the blur of the mirage as duak fell, the Turkish General, taking them for a new brigade of cavarry, decamped forthwith.

The camel so far has been but an auxiliary in the second line of transport, but much is expected of him, though he is woefully misunderstood. Like the yak, he is a providentially ascetic beast, and has the supreme virtue of living on the soil. The prickly Apool is sufficient for his needs on easy days, but when marching he is given his balls of moistened grain. The riverain breed, or Yudi, as he is locally called, is not, like his Bedaue brother, trained to go without water; but he is proof against camel fly, and has certain virtues of his own.

TRINITY COLLEGE MISSION IN BELFAST.

ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN'S APPROVAL

BISHOP OF DOWN AND CHURCH PROBLEMS.

Mission in connection with the Church of Ireland in Belfast was held in the Regent House, Trinity College, Dublin, last evening. The Archbishop of Dublin presided, and amongst those present were;—

The Bishop of Down, Rev. N. J. D. White, D.D.; Rev. I. G. Carleton, D.D.; Rev. Canon Jonnisza, M.A.; Rev. H. J. Lawlor, D.Lit; L. C. Pourser, F.T.C.D.; Rev. H. B. Kennedy, B.D.; Rev. E. J. Young, B.D.; Rev. Canon Bor, B.D.; Rev. E. M. Gwynn, F.T.C.D.; W. A., Ferra: J.P., etc.

THE BISHOP OF DOWN.

The Bishop of Down said he regarded the Mission as a connecting link between the City of Belfast and the University of Dublin, ooth of which were great Irish institutions. They all knew what a valuable Irish institution the Dublin University was, but he was afraid very few realised what a great Irish institution the City of Belfast was. It was a wonderful the City of Belfast was. It was a wonderful the City of Belfast was. It was a wonderful the City of Belfast was. It was the mewest city of its size in the United Kingdom. Its newness was its glory, and rightly so. It was splendid to have an ancient and plorious history such as many of the Dublin institutions bad, but it was also splendid to have a mighty and vigorous new life, which could not be kept within circumscribed bounds. That was the case with Belfast, and as he looked back on the unceasing changes which had taken place during the past thirty years of his experience in connection with it, he could not help being surprised at its greatiness and magnificence. Having mentioned several of the developments and constructions which he regarded as of overwhelming magnitude, he said that, from the material point of view, Belfast, is the grandest thing in Ireland. It had now a population of over 400,000, and of these there were 125,000 Church people. There were slightly more Presbyterians, and about 20,000 Roman Catholics. In those 125,000 Church people there were members of all ranks and classes, but the great majority of them were of the skilled artisans were now earning high wages, were moving out to the garden cities which were springing up in all the suburbs of the city, but the purely labouring classes were maining in the centre, and these constituted the Church problem they had to deal with. In the Parish of St. Mary's, where the Trinity College Mission was situated, there was a Church population of 12,000 people, and this down the problem they had to deal with. In the Parish of St. Mary's, where the Trinity College Mission was situat The Bishop of Down said he regarded the fission as a connecting link between the City f Belfast and the University of Dublin, both

DRINK AND THE RATES. TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRESH TIMES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sin.—Will you allow me to enter my protest against the exceedingly high rates of this city, and especially against the Union poor frate! A very valid protest was issued in the Dublin County Council against paying what is in reality a preventible outlay. Everybody knows from what source come the great majority of the paupers and a very large proportion of the lunatics; and everybody knows that that source is intoxicating liquors. Notwithstanding these facts, the ratepayers of the City of Dublin send to the City Hall and to the Union Boards a very large number of the gentlemen whose business creates paupers and Innatics, and then are surprised that the rates in the City of Dublin are so high.

When the deputation of shipbuilders waited in the Chancellor of the Exchequer they told in that the remedy is prohibition during on the Chancellor of the Exchequer they told him that the remedy is probibition during the war for the whole country, and, had prohibition been put into force, then Dublin would have saved something over £1,000,000 every year. Any of the men who had been thrown out of employment through such an act of prohibition would have had the chance of obtaining employment which was useful to the community instead of hartful, as the demand on labour many times as great as that made by the brewers and distillers. It may be noted that there are under 100 publicans in Dublin who sell nothing else but drink. The majority of the others sell groceries, and the demand for groceries would be greatly increased if no money was spent on intoxicants. As I am writing, will you allow me to protest against the supplying of intoxicants to persons in the Unions?

I might ve cases m four years; two friends and numbers of other people have suffered in the east way, and some time ago twenty-two dogs war, and some time ago to the people and on the year. The present method of selling strychnine is a public scandal. The results show that undesirable and ill-conditioned persons obtain it for cowardly and unlawful purposes. I would advise any person valuing his dog not to bring it here until this state of things has been put a stop to—Yours, etc.

THE FAST HERTS ELECTION

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES. TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In common with many others, who have no axes of our own to grand, and are supremely anxious to have this war carried to a speedy and successful conclusion, may I say that I regard the result of the East Herts election with great regret! If we consider the object of the German air raids on England, and the contract common to the contract contract common to the contract c election with great regret? If we consider the object of the German air raids on England, we cannot come to the conclusion that the enemy expect to bring about any considerable military result, but rather that their hope is to depress civilians, to make them discontented with the Government, and so bring pressure to bear on it to divert its energies from military objects to matters which, so far as the war is concerned, can have no direct result. If the East Herts election is an index of English opinion in general, the Kaiser is doubtless congratulating himself on a marked success, and will probably renew these murderous attacks. I do not think it can under any circumstances be possible to guard against a certain amount of casualties when bombe are dropped at random on villages and unprotected towns. It will be a national disaster if the Government, in the vain attempt to effect the impossible, allows itself to be forced to let anything interfere with the paramount need of supplying the Navy and Army with sufficient air craft and everything else that is needed to enable them to beat the Germans by ses and land.

Surely at a time like this it is the duty of pairiotic men to support the Government, composed as it is of leaders of three great parties in the State, and possessed of fuller information than can be enjoyed by outsiders, and not to allow themselves to be unduly influenced by scarremongers, whether newspaper men or members of Parliament, who, whatever their object may be, have done their utmost to encourage our chemics and to dishearten our own people and our Allies.—

LONDON STOCK MARKETS BETTER.

A SATISFACTORY TONE. WAR FINANCE INFLUENCES.

There was no fresh accession of energy on the Stock Exchange. The tone was, for the most part, satisfactory, but the disposition to await speeches in Parliament on the Army Estimates was, if anything, more pronounced than yesterday, markets being evidently of the opinion that the debate might afford some clue as to the Government's intentions with regard to the next War Loan. The volume of transactions just now shows little change from day to day, but brokers state that individual orders are small, and that official markings are, therefore, a misleading guide to correct estimates of the actual amount of business now being carried on. In this connection the view is frequently heard that the present conditions are really less encouraging than at almost any time since the re-opaning of the House last year. This semi-paralysis, however, is in such an important degree attributable to the impending War Loan operation that the completion of the latter should lead to improvement.

Meanwhile, the cheerfulness of specialities is proof of underlying healthiness. The gilted market was steady, rod recorded little net change. Consols were lower at first, but finished unaltered at 57½ The 5½ p. c. and 4½ p.c. War Loans were also without net variation at 57½ and 95½ respectively. Home Rails were inclined to work forward. Americans, though spottily higher, continued reserved, in sympathy with New York, but Canadian Pacifics and Argentine Rails again showed to advantage. In the Foreign market, the French Loan reacted ½ to 84½, but Russians held steady. The rot in Japanese issues continued. Kaffirs were quieter among Mines, some diminution in Cape dealings making the market more cantions.

Indian Government issues marked time. There was a decline of ½ to 54 in 2½ p.c. The price of copper rose and of the proper is the proper of the proper is a second to the proper is the market more contions.
